I find castle design and layout fascinating. Over the hundreds of years they were built, design and purpose evolved. These days, while some people built homes that look like and/or are called castles, they aren't castles in the historic sense. Historically castles were built for defense and ultimately survival.. Below we set out the 9 main different types of castles.

9 Types of Castles Built Throughout History

A tower house is a particular type of stone structure, built for defensive purposes as well as habitation. Tower houses began to appear in the Middle Ages, especially in mountainous or limited access areas, in order to command and defend strategic points with reduced forces.At the same time, they were also used as an aristocrat's residence, around which a castle town was often constructed.
